BD Dominates Week 12 and Finds Herself in a Comfortable Lead

With Only 5 Weeks Left, the Top Contenders Begin Pulling Away

Effective date: 2015-12-01

BD has yet again shown her strength and staying power, with another dominant week. BD came into Week 12 sharing the top spot with DP, who had a breakout Week 11. BD has either been by herself in first place or tied for first since Week 4. Although she came into Week 12 tied for first, she left three games up after a stunning 12 winners, to lead all scorers in Week 12. DP fell one spot where he now shares second place with SS. SS also had a great Week 12 performance, logging in 11 winners to maintain his footing near the top. BS rounds out the top, sitting alone in fourth at six games back. The next contender is a full nine games back, so it would appear that our top three or four have established themselves heading into the home stretch, unless a dark horse decides to turn up the heat!

Other honors on the week go to KS, who was the only other double digit picker, with 10 wins. NF had yet another Loner Pick, choosing the Ravens over the Browns. Membership had a much stronger showing this week, and since the low point of the year, and potentially the history of PFVCC (yes, I do mean Week 10), winning percentages have been up and the MIP is in our rearview. Now that Thanksgiving week is behind us, the fun really begins. Crazy picks and lots of games, as we have 16 game weeks from here on out. Let’s see what the middle of the pack can do to spice up the top!

Happy Picking

JP