

CM moves one week closer to PFVCC Glory

Leads week with 11 wins alongside LF and PM

Effective date: 2019-12-18

Here we sit after week 15, and if you were expecting the narrative to change... well, it hasn't. CM still sits on his perch and again he leads the week in wins. Frustrating for those trailing him, and especially frustrating for LF who was certainly ready to make his move this week and close the gap up top. LF managed to post a solid week but only solid enough to share a spiteful cheers with CM as they both posted 11 in the wins column. Our friend PM, who has been scrappy all season long, also posted 11 wins to share in the cheers...impressive, but not according to his plan to finish with 3 straight perfect weeks to wrap this thing up and move himself into contention (we were rooting for you PM!). 11 wins is still deserving of golf clap though, so well played to the aforementioned trio!!

MM made his presence known this week, as he likes to do on occasion, by posting 3 loner picks on the board to make things interesting. Interesting on Friday night turned into interestingly painful on Sunday as he missed on all 3 attempts. CAR couldn't defeat SEA, DET got out dueled by TB, and WAS tried to upset PHI but the task was too tough as PHI is battling for their playoff lives. Tough take on the week but we always appreciate your guts MM! We salute you!

2 weeks left hanging in the balance...CM is primed and ready for the final stretch drive and all the rest of us can do is just look up and hope that he forgets to make his picks... We will see you back here for the Christmas Edition writeup next week!

Still Pimpin',

LF
