

MM dazzles in week 3 with 12 winners to show for it

All time wins leader SS passes significant milestone

Effective date: 2020-09-30

3 weeks in the books and although some teams are still trying to work through the challenges of early injuries and figuring out their identity in fan-less stadiums, most members find themselves settling into a groove. No member was more groovy in week 3 than our friend MM who had Curtis Mayfield's "Move on Up" blasting all Sunday long as he moved on up in the standings behind his 12 win performance. MM set the dance floor ablaze and now finds himself a game out of the top spot, nice moves MM!! Too bashful to be out in limelight on their own this time around were SS, DR, KS and LF stood off to the side like seniors without prom dates and discussed their 10 wins amongst themselves. Still solid performances overall gentlemen and enough to keep everyone in the conversation for prom king moving forward.

Moving on to some loner news, week 3 featured 4 loner picks by 4 different members..tasty! Of the bunch, only SR had tastebuds worthy enough for victory as his pick of MIA over JAX proved to satisfy his hunger. Nice pick SR. The rest of the lot weren't so fortunate as DR saw DEN get taken out by TB, MM watched his NYG get manhandled by SF and MS is still wondering how the heck his CIN matchup ended up in a tie against PHI. The world will never know. Nonetheless, we appreciate the audacity my friends!

We cannot move on from week 3 without tipping the cap to our all time wins leader, who continues to batter the wins column with reckless abandon and show us what it means to be a winner..8 times that is. Only 1 deserves such an intro and that is SS, who is now the first member in our PFVCC's illustrious history to reach 6,000 career victories! A well deserved congrats from all of us SS!!

Now on to week 4..

Still Pimpin',
