MM & SS stand face to face on the week 4 winners podium

2020 calls, forces NFL to play hopscotch with schedule

Effective date: 2020-10-07

So, we are officially a month into the 2020 NFL season and it seems the road to PFVCC glory only gets tougher as the days pass. This past week featured a flurry of positive coronavirus tests in a few locker rooms across the league causing a domino effect that still has yet to see an end. One game was postponed until a later date, while another was pushed to Monday night and showcased a QB that most probably didn't even know still had a job in the NFL (Brian Hoyer). Is this going to be a trend moving forward? That answer still hangs in the balance, but it doesn't take Dr. Fauci to see that it's probably just the beginning of this rollercoaster of a season. I guess we will see who's daring enough to ride..

Six Flags season ticket holders SS and MM never see a coaster too big for their britches as they both embrace loops and corkscrews of the 12 win variety and take top honors for the week! Those performances have them in sole possession of the 1 and 2 spots respectfully, truly nice picking!! LF enjoys his fair share of coasters as he posted 11 winners and the 5-some of KS, DP, MS, BS and NF lock in 10 wins themselves. Solid performances comrades! Taking a look at the standings, it has thinned out a little at the top as everyone lost ground on our top performers. Most notable were DR and CM who both had tough weeks and dropped a combined 7 games on the leader and now are looking to bounce back in week 5. Keep trucking Gents!

Loner news is quick this week as we only had 2 on the board. LF lost.. he picked DET. Nothing further. But MS… The man the myth (not legend quite yet) demands all the spotlight as his CLE pick ran circles around the DAL Cowgirls. Very well played MS!

Let's take our talents to week 5
