Possible MIP sighting casts darkness over members

CM and MS find light behind their 9 wins

Effective date: 2020-11-04

Could it be here? Could it be upon us? The midseason indifference phenomenon….The all dreaded MIP may have reared its ugly head to membership in week 8 and right on queue as we just passed the midway point of the season. Recapping a tough week for most we see that not a single member notched double digit victories and most were happy to just break even. CM and MS were the two that had the most success in a down week as they were able to scrape together 9 wins each to take top honors. Nice piece of picking boys! DP and LF were next in line with 8 winners to wrap up the weekly barely notables as the rest of the crew is licking their wounds and looking forward to next weeks' slate of games.

Loner news was lead by MM this week as he went 1 for 1 as his ATL pick was able to take down CAR on Thursday night. Great way to start the week MM! DR and SR weren't so fortunate as DR missed on both of his attempts behind NE and NYJ who lost to BUF and KC respectively. SR is next on the close but no cigar loner board as his pick of SF proved to be too risky to pay off. DR and SR, we appreciate the effort and know its soon to pay off!

Overall, in a week that most would rather forget, headlines still must be written and so the pen goes…MM was able to keep his spot on top without any infringement on his lead. CM's performance was good enough to slide him into a two way tie for second with SS. And finally, the MIP still might be looming… Halfway home and still lots of picks to be made. Goodluck in the second half!

Still Pimpin',
