

The MIP taunts the field in week 9

SS leads the way with 9 wins

Effective date: 2021-11-10

Week 9 wasn't all that everyone had hoped for after a week 8 that challenged the picking field. In fact, week 9 was even more challenging, and if mentioning the MIP last week was just enough to stir the pot then I take full responsibility for egging it on. Week 9 stumped most, but even in a mippy week SS was able to wrangle in 9 wins to lead all pickers and with that, gain a game on the leaderboards. Slowly but surely SS has been chipping away at an 8 game deficit, and he now sits 5 back. Nice picking SS. SR, LF, KS, CM, MM and DP finished the week with 8 wins which is respectable considering the unpredictability we've seen across the NFL. Way to fight gents. Call it a wash and we move on!

With 7 games on loner alert; week 8 gave us plenty to watch out for up and down the schedule. The 7 loners were picked between 3 pickers who were pushing their chips into the center of the table trying to score big on the field. The strategy was bold, and the results told the tale...

DP went 1/2 on his picks with NYJ losing to IND on TNF, but his NYG answered the call against LV. Not too shabby DP

LF also went 1/2, with ATL knocking off NO in a nail biter, and his MIN pick losing on the other side of a nail biter in OT to BAL. So close but no cigar.

DR had 3 loners on display and went 1/3 on those picks. DEN beat the brakes off of DAL but SF and CHI couldn't take out their respective opponents. Tough week on loners but DR is a fighter!!

With the MIP hopefully behind us, I sense a change in the tides. Here's to some breakout performances in week 10!! Best of luck

Your President,

LF
