

SR & MM rip down 12 wins a piece to lead

LF & MS both falter; SR finds himself in a familiar place once again

Effective date: 2021-12-15

In a chaotic turn of events it is clear now that SR only put the penthouse up on Airbnb for a couple of weeks to reset his sights and give someone else (LF) an opportunity to take a look inside and see what winning looks and feels like. Only a rental... With bags unpacked and all, SR and his week 14 co-leader MM flaunted their 12 winners for all to see. It must feel nice to be back on top. Well played you two!! Following those two aces were another tandem that capitalized on a tough slate of games, SS and CM. They were able to reel in 11 wins and capture a few whispers from the rest of the pack. With their performances, CM is doing his best to chip away and SS continues to inch closer to the top spot. Just 4 back with 4 to go, it is dangerous times for all near the top.

Loner news left much to be desired in week 14. We had 3 attempts on the pick sheet and when it was all said and done, not one of those games were remotely close. Out of respect to the two pickers that already suffered at the hands of the teams they put their faith in, we shan't say who...why throw salt in the open wound? You two know who you are and that is enough.. Now shake it off and get back out there!

Week 15 is approaching which means that we are officially entering picking pandamonium (you heard it here first). With 4 weeks to play and bye weeks now behind us, it is now a full 16 game slate from here on out. More games, more GOO, more opportunities to make moves (or mistakes).

With the end slowly coming into frame, stress levels begin to rise. Who will finish the season on a high note and who will fall to the waste side? We will have those answers shortly. See you back here in a weeks time!

Your President,

LF